Preface

The Singapore Department of Statistics (DOS) develops national statistical standards and promotes their adoption and use in Singapore. The adoption and use of these standards in the collection, analysis and dissemination of statistics ensures consistency and comparability of data, facilitating relevant and meaningful analysis as well as data sharing.

The Singapore Standard Industrial Classification (SSIC) is the national standard for classifying of economic activities undertaken by economic units. The SSIC is used for censuses of population, business surveys and administrative databases. The SSIC adopts the basic framework of the International Standard Industrial Classification of All Economic Activities Revision 4 (ISIC Rev. 4) developed by the United Nations Statistics Division (UNSD). It is reviewed and updated periodically to reflect developments in the Singapore economy, particularly the emergence of new economic activities as well as to align with changes in the international standard.

The SSIC 2020 is the fourteenth edition of the SSIC and supersedes the previous editions. The SSIC 2020 is a significant update over the SSIC 2015 (Version 2018) edition. Detailed definitions are included for all five-digit level codes and the number of unique examples in the alphabetical index has increased significantly.

The review of the SSIC was undertaken by a working group comprising representatives from many agencies, including the Singapore Department of Statistics, Accounting and Corporate Regulatory Authority, Central Provident Fund Board, Economic Development Board, Infocomm Media Development Authority, Ministry of Manpower, SkillsFuture Singapore and Workforce Singapore. Inputs from other ministries and statutory boards have also been incorporated, where appropriate. I would like to thank all who have contributed to the review of the classification.

Part I: Introduction and Methodological Notes

1. Introduction

1.1. The Singapore Standard Industrial Classification (SSIC) is designed for use in the collection of data (e.g. censuses, surveys, administrative records) that requires the classification of economic activities undertaken by economic units. It is also used in the compilation, presentation and analysis of a wide range of economic statistics. To ensure the continuing relevance of the SSIC, the classification is revised and updated regularly, taking into account recent developments in the economy.

1.2. DOS led a multi-agency working group in the revision of the SSIC and consulted public agencies for their views on the classification. The deliberations and consultations ensure the SSIC would continue to meet the classification needs of users and producers of economic data.

1.3. Similar to earlier versions of the SSIC, the SSIC 2020 adopts the basic framework of the International Standard Industrial Classification of All Economic Activities Revision 4 (ISIC Rev. 4) for international comparability, with appropriate modifications and updates to take into account changes in Singapore's economy and users' requirements.

1.4. There are significant updates to the SSIC 2020 compared to the SSIC 2015 (Version 2018). Detailed definitions have been included for all the 1,023 five-digit SSIC codes, and the number of unique examples in the alphabetical index has increased by more than 1,000. New five-digit codes have been added to track emerging economic activities like online marketplaces for goods and services and Continuing Education and Training (CET) services.

2. Structure of the SSIC

2.1. The framework used for the design and construction of SSIC is adapted from ISIC Rev. 4. Its scope is defined by the production boundary of the United Nations' System of National Accounts 2008 (2008 SNA). It is based on the economic activity undertaken by an economic unit in the economy.

Economic Activity

2.2. An economic activity takes place when resources such as labour, capital, goods and services are used in a production process to produce goods and services.

2.3. An economic activity can be distinguished into three types:

Principal activity refers to the activity that contributes the most to the value added (VA)¹ of the goods and services produced by the economic unit, or the activity with the highest VA among the activities of the unit.

Secondary activity refers to each separate activity undertaken by the economic unit that produces products or services for third parties which is not the unit's principal activity.

Ancillary activity refers to activity undertaken to support the main productive activities of an economic unit by providing goods or services entirely for the use of that unit. Examples of such activities are human resource functions, bookkeeping, purchasing, storage and sales promotion.

2.4. Figure 2-1 illustrates the concept of principal, secondary and ancillary activities. The economic unit's principal activity is 'Retail sale of handphones and peripheral equipment' as it is the activity with the highest VA. 'Repair of communications equipment (e.g. mobile phones and fax machines)' is considered a secondary activity as the repair services are provided to third parties but does not generate the highest VA. Ancillary activities are not considered when determining the economic unit's principal activity as they support the principal and secondary activities of the unit and do not contribute directly to its VA.

¹ Value added (VA) is a measure of an economic activity's contribution to Gross Domestic Product (GDP), which is an aggregated measure of a country's production. Gross VA is obtained by subtracting the value of a unit's inputs for production from the value of the unit's output from production.

Economic Unit

2.5. Economic unit refers to the unit that is engaged in an economic activity. In Singapore, the two common types of economic unit are the “Enterprise” and “Establishment”.

Enterprise is an institutional unit in its capacity as a producer of goods and services and is usually a legal unit at which financial and balance sheet accounts are maintained. It can be engaged in one or more productive activities.

Establishment is an economic unit which has been defined for statistical production. It predominantly engages in one kind of economic activity at a single location.

2.6. For most firms, the enterprise is the equivalent of the establishment. Large and complex enterprises that engage in multiple economic activities belonging to different SSIC industries will be broken down into establishments if the separate economic activities are identifiable. Figure 2-2 illustrates the enterprise and establishment relationship.

Structure of the Classification

2.7. The SSIC is a classification with a hierarchical structure. At the highest level of aggregation, there are 21 broad categories known as “Sections”, each denoted by a single alphabetical letter. Each “Section” comprises one or more “Divisions” as shown below:

Section	Division
A Agriculture and Fishing	01-03
B Mining and Quarrying	08-09
C Manufacturing	10-32
D Electricity, Gas, Steam and Air-Conditioning Supply	35
E Water Supply; Sewerage, Waste Management and Remediation Activities	36-38
F Construction	41-43
G Wholesale and Retail Trade	46-47
H Transportation and Storage	49-53
I Accommodation and Food Service Activities	55-56
J Information and Communications	58-63
K Financial and Insurance Activities	64-66

Section	Division
L Real Estate Activities	68
M Professional, Scientific and Technical Activities	69-75
N Administrative and Support Service Activities	77-82
O Public Administration and Defence	84
P Education	85
Q Health and Social Services	86-88
R Arts, Entertainment and Recreation	90-93
S Other Service Activities	94-96
T Activities of Households as Employers of Domestic Personnel	97
U Activities of Extra-Territorial Organisations and Bodies	99

2.8. A numerical five-digit coding system is used to distinguish the different levels of classification. The system is hierarchical in nature, showing progressively finer detail from the highest numeric level of aggregation (Division) to the lowest level (Sub-class). This allows users the flexibility to tabulate, analyse and publish data according to the level of detail required. An example of the hierarchical nature of the SSIC is shown below:

Classification Level	Classification Title	Classification Code
Section	Manufacturing	C
Division	Manufacture of Computer, Electronic and Optical Products	26
Group	Manufacture of Electronic Components and Boards	261
Class	Manufacture of Semiconductor Devices	2611
Sub-class	Semiconductor Wafer Fabrication	26112

2.9. In cases at the three- and four-digit levels where a given level of classification is not divided into categories at the next more detailed level of classification, the last digit of the code for the only category at the next more detailed level would be '0'. For instance, the group 'Construction of Buildings' is coded as SSIC 410 as the Division 'Construction of Buildings' (code 41) contains only one group. Similarly, the code for the Class 'Passenger and Freight Rail Transport' is SSIC 4910 as it is the only Class within the Group 'Transport via Railways' (code 491).

2.10. At the three-, four- and five-digit levels, the digit '9' that appears in the last digit position usually denotes residual activities grouped at the respective level of detail. These residual activities usually comprise a range of the less common types of economic activities which are not significant enough to justify a separate code. They are grouped together as a separate category so that no activities, however small or insignificant, are left out of the classification structure. The description of such codes usually ends with the term 'n.e.c.', which stands for 'not elsewhere classified'.

2.11. The numerical codes of the SSIC 2020 are closely aligned with the ISIC Rev. 4 to facilitate easy comparison between the two classifications. As such, the codes at the two-, three- and four-digit levels may not run consecutively if an ISIC code is not used in SSIC. For instance, the SSIC does not contain the ISIC codes 05 'Mining of Coal and Lignite', 06 'Extraction of Crude Petroleum and Natural Gas' and 07 'Mining of Metal Ores'.

Detailed Definitions, Alphabetical Index and Correspondence Tables

2.12. Detailed definitions have been added for each five-digit SSIC code. Each detailed definition includes a brief lead statement describing the scope of the economic activity. At the end of each five-digit code definition is a list of economic activities that are excluded to provide clarity on the scope of the five-digit SSIC code.

For example, the five-digit definition for growing of fruits is:

Sub-class 01130 'Growing of fruits'
Lead statement describing scope of economic activity	This Sub-class includes growing of fruits such as banana, papaya, mangoes, dates and/or pineapples.
Economic activities that should be classified elsewhere	This Sub-class excludes: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • growing of leafy and fruit vegetables (non-hydroponics), see 01111 • growing of leafy and fruit vegetables (hydroponics), see 01120 • growing of nursery products (e.g. orchids, ornamental plants), see 0114

2.13. Two-way correspondence tables between SSIC 2020 and SSIC 2015 (Version 2018), and SSIC 2020 and ISIC Rev. 4 are available at the most detailed level. Correspondence tables between SSIC 2020 and SSIC 2015 (Version 2018) help users to link data that are coded in different versions of the SSIC. Correspondence tables between SSIC 2020 and ISIC Rev. 4 are useful tools to convert SSIC-based data into ISIC-based data and vice-versa for international comparability.

2.14. The SSIC's alphabetical index contains the different terms that are used to describe an economic activity. It is useful in determining the appropriate classification codes when different terms are provided in statistical and administrative data collections.

2.15. The detailed definitions, alphabetical index and correspondence tables are available on the Statistics Singapore Website and may be updated periodically to facilitate users' coding.

3. Application of the Classification

3.1. The classification principles form the basis on which the SSIC 2020 is structured and applied.

Basic Principles

3.2. An economic unit is assigned an SSIC code based on its principal activity, which is the activity that contributes the most to the VA of the goods and services produced by the unit.

3.3. It should be emphasised that an economic unit's SSIC code does not depend on the following characteristics:

Characteristics that are not relevant when determining SSIC code	Examples
Type of ownership	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Foreign, local, private or government owned
Type of legal organisation	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Sole proprietorship, partnership, company
Type of production	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Formal or informal production Market or non-market production Production by factories or households
Mode of delivery	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Internet or traditional brick-and-mortar

For instance:

- Firms that retail clothes solely through the Internet are classified with firms that retail clothes through brick-and-mortar stores
- Firms that provide virtual banking services are classified with brick-and-mortar banks

Principal Activity and the Top-Down Method

3.4. The principal activity of an economic unit is determined by the activity that contributes the most VA using the top-down method.

3.5. The top-down approach follows a hierarchical principle to ensure that the classification at the lowest level is consistent with the classification at the highest level. It starts by identifying the SSIC Section that contributes the highest VA, followed by the Division and then the Group and so on until the highest VA item within the Class is obtained. Based on the top-down method, the SSIC code of the economic unit in the example given in Figure 3-1 is SSIC 27201 'Manufacture of primary batteries' as the VA of SSIC 27 'Manufacture of electrical equipment' is the highest.

Section	C 'Manufacturing' (VA = 10)			L 'Real Estate Activities' (VA = 5)
Division	24 'Manufacture of basic metals' (VA = 4)	27 'Manufacture of electrical equipment' (VA = 6)	68 'Real estate activities' (VA = 5)
Group	241 'Manufacture of basic iron and steel' (VA = 4)	272 'Manufacture of batteries and accumulators' (VA = 4)	275 'Manufacture of domestic appliances' (VA = 2)	681 'Real estate activities with own or leased property' (VA = 5)
Class	2410 'Manufacture of basic iron and steel' (VA = 4)	2720 'Manufacture of batteries and accumulators' (VA = 4)	2750 'Manufacture of domestic appliances' (VA = 2)	6810 'Real estate activities with own or leased property' (VA = 5)
Sub-class	24101 'Iron and steel rolling mills' (VA = 4)	27201 'Manufacture of primary batteries' (VA = 4)	27509 'Manufacture of domestic appliances n.e.c.' (VA = 2)	68101 'Real estate developers' (VA = 5)

Note:

VA refers to value added

Value Added Substitutes

3.6. Where it is not possible to obtain information on VA of the goods sold or services rendered, the principal activity could be determined by other alternatives such as:

- Gross output that is attributable to the goods or services
- Value of sales or shipments of those groups of products falling into each category of activity
- Proportion of employment or wages in the various activities

Treatment of Vertical Integration

3.7. In some economic units, the activities undertaken are vertically integrated, i.e. the activities extend over a number of stages in the production of a product and the output of one process serves as the input for the next (e.g. tree felling combined with sawmilling, production of pulp combined with operation of paper mill). The unit is to be classified based on the principal activity among the different stages.

3.8. In instances where the value added cannot be estimated for each of the vertically integrated activities, the principal activity could be determined by comparison with units that engage in similar activities. If this cannot be done, the unit should then be classified based on its final activity.

Economic Units not yet in Operation

3.9. In some cases, economic units may need to carry out preparatory activities before they can commence operations. Shops or restaurants, for example, might need to renovate their premises. If they undertake these activities themselves, they are to be classified based on their intended activity and not their preparatory activity such as interior decoration or construction.

3.10. Large enterprises or establishments (e.g. hotels, factories, theme parks) are more likely to either outsource the preparatory activities or to establish separate establishments to undertake them. In this case, the large enterprises or establishments are to be classified according to their intended activity while the establishments they set up to undertake the preparatory activity are to be classified under the appropriate preparatory activity.

Outsourcing

3.11. Outsourcing is an arrangement whereby a unit (Principal) engages the service of another unit (Contractor) to carry out specific tasks in the production process on a fee or contract basis. Figure 3-2 illustrates how the outsourcing principle is applied.

3.12. For service industries and construction, the Principal is considered as though it undertakes the production process itself regardless of whether part of or the entire production process is outsourced.

3.13. For manufacturing, the classification of the Principal when the production process is outsourced depends on whether it owns the input materials. If the Principal owns the input materials, it is classified in manufacturing as it owns both the inputs and final outputs. However, if the Principal does not own the input materials, it should be classified in Section G 'Wholesale and Retail Trade' according to the type of goods sold as it is purchasing the final goods from the Contractor for resale to other parties.

3.14. Units which are engaged by the Principal as a contractor are to be classified under the activity codes related to the specific outsourced tasks, regardless of whether part of or the entire production process is subsequently further outsourced.

Online Marketplaces

3.15. Online marketplaces are intermediary platforms that facilitate orders for goods or services between buyers and sellers usually on a fee or commission basis, without taking ownership of the goods or providing the services that are being sold through their online platforms (e.g. website, mobile application). Such economic units are to be classified in SSIC 632 'Online Marketplaces'.

3.16. Intermediaries that do not facilitate orders for goods and services mainly through online platforms are excluded from SSIC 632 'Online Marketplaces'. For instance, contractors that carry out wholesale trade on a fee or commission basis not through online platforms are to be classified in SSIC 46100 'Wholesale on a fee or commission basis (excluding online marketplaces)'.

Retail of Self-Produced Goods

3.17. In some cases, an economic unit may sell the goods it produces directly to the consumer. As retail trade involves the sale of goods by the retailers, the sale of goods produced by manufacturers themselves should not be viewed as a separate activity. A manufacturing establishment which sells its own products is to be classified under manufacturing and not retail trade.

3.18. For example, a tailor is classified under SSIC 14103 'Tailoring and dressmaking' in manufacturing and not as a retailer even though he makes and sells clothes to his customers. However, if the manufacturing establishment sells other goods (in addition to self-produced goods), the selling of the other goods is a retail activity. If the VA arising from the sale of other goods (i.e. the trade margin) is more than the VA from the manufacture (and sale) of its own produced good, then its principal activity is retail trade and it should be classified in Section G 'Wholesale and Retail Trade'.

Government Activities

3.19. Government units are to be classified based on their principal activities and not necessarily under Section O 'Public Administration and Defence'. For instance, government schools are classified in Section P 'Education' while the monetary authority is classified in Section K 'Financial and Insurance Activities'.

Repair and Maintenance

3.20. Depending on the nature of the goods, economic units carrying out repair and maintenance activities can either be classified under Section C 'Manufacturing' or Section S 'Other Service Activities'. Units that repair or overhaul capital goods are classified in the same code as the units that produce the goods in Section C 'Manufacturing' since units manufacturing such goods often also provide repairing and maintenance services for the same goods. Activities pertaining to the repair of consumer goods (e.g. cars, computers, hand phones, household and personal goods) are classified in Division 95 'Repair of Computers, Personal & Household Goods and Vehicles' in Section S 'Other Service Activities'.

4. Comparison with SSIC 2015 (Version 2018)

Overview

4.1. The more significant changes in the SSIC 2020 compared to the SSIC 2015 (Version 2018) are summarised below:

- Detailed definitions have been included for all the 1,023 five-digit level SSIC codes
- Around 40 SSIC codes, mainly under Section C 'Manufacturing', have been removed as there are no or very few units
- More than 1,000 unique alphabetical index entries have been added
- New five-digit codes for intermediation activities have been added

- Retail sales economic activities have been structured based on the type of products sold instead of type of channels
- SSIC 854 'Other Education' has been re-scoped to support tracking of CET activities

4.2. A comparison of the number of codes at various levels between SSIC 2020 and SSIC 2015 (Version 2018) is shown in the following table:

Inclusion of Five-Digit Definitions for Economic Activities

4.3. For SSIC 2020, detailed definitions for economic activities at the five-digit level have been included. This will help users to distinguish between the different codes and reduce errors in assigning the appropriate SSIC codes at the five-digit level.

Removal of Obsolete Codes

4.4. Around 40 SSIC codes that are obsolete or have few units have been removed. This is to ensure that the SSIC remains relevant and leave room for new codes to be created to meet users' needs.

Improvements to Alphabetical Index

4.5. More than 1,000 new and unique economic activity titles have been added to facilitate the use of the alphabetical index for coding purpose.

New Five-Digit Codes for Online Marketplaces

4.6. With the growing importance of different forms of online marketplaces, a new three-digit Group has been created under Section J 'Information and Communications' with five new five-digit Sub-classes.

4.7. Online marketplaces refer to economic units that facilitate transfer of ownership of goods or services through their online platforms (e.g. website, mobile application) between buyers and sellers by providing all or some of the services listed below:

- Listing of demand and/or supply for goods or services on their online platforms
- Placement of order
- Facilitation of payment
- Delivery of the good or service

4.8. The key characteristic of online marketplaces is that they do not own the goods or provide the services sold through their online platforms and instead receive a fee or commission for their services.

Merging of Retail Sale Channels

4.9. In SSIC 2015 (Version 2018) and ISIC Rev. 4, retail sales were classified according to sales channel via brick and mortar shops, vending machines and Internet. As firms increasingly adopt a multi-channel approach or shift quickly between retail channels to engage their customers, it is no longer appropriate to classify retail sales by the various sales channels. In SSIC 2020, retail sales economic activities are instead structured based on the type of products sold.

Re-scoping of SSIC 854 'Other Education'

4.10. With the emphasis on CET, SSIC 854 'Other Education' has been restructured to capture activities of economic units that provide CET courses.
