PREFACE

The Singapore Department of Statistics (DOS) develops national statistical standards and promotes their adoption and use in Singapore. The adoption and use of these standards in the collection, analysis and dissemination of statistics ensure consistency and comparability of data, facilitating relevant and meaningful analysis as well as data sharing.

Classifications of economic activities have been standardised and published as the Singapore Standard Industrial Classification (SSIC) since 1958. The SSIC is used for censuses of population, household and establishment surveys and increasingly, in administrative databases. The SSIC adopts the basic framework and principles of the International Standard Industrial Classification of All Economic Activities (ISIC) developed by the United Nations Statistics Division. It is reviewed and updated regularly to reflect significant changes in the structure of the Singapore economy and the emergence of new activities as well as to align with changes in the international standard.

The SSIC 2010 is the tenth version of the SSIC and supersedes earlier versions. This publication includes the industrial codes, scope and structure of the classification as well as descriptions of the principles. To facilitate better understanding and appropriate use of the classification, detailed write-up is provided at the class (four-digit) level. A comparison table of SSIC 2005 and SSIC 2010 up to class level is also included to facilitate better understanding of the changes.

The review of the SSIC was undertaken by a working group comprising representatives from many agencies, including the Singapore Department of Statistics, Ministry of Manpower, Accounting and Corporate Regulatory Authority, Central Provident Fund Board, Economic Development Board, Building and Construction Authority, Infocomm Development Authority of Singapore, Monetary Authority of Singapore and Ministry of Information, Communications and the Arts. Inputs from other ministries and statutory boards have also been incorporated where appropriate. I would like to thank all who have contributed to the review of the classification.

SINGAPORE STANDARD INDUSTRIAL CLASSIFICATION 2010

Introduction

The Singapore Standard Industrial Classification (SSIC) is designed for use in the collection of data (e.g. censuses, surveys, administrative records) that requires the classification of economic activities. It is also used in the compilation, presentation and analysis of a wide range of statistics, including national income, production, as well as demographic, social and labour statistics.

2 The SSIC 2010 adopts the basic framework of the International Standard Industrial Classification Revision 4 (ISIC Rev. 4) with appropriate modifications to take into account Singapore's unique economic circumstances while enhancing international comparability. The classification also incorporates recent changes in economic activities to better reflect the current structure of Singapore's economy.

Nature and Principles of the Classification

Conceptual Framework

3 The SSIC is a classification of economics activities undertaken by economic units. It does not draw distinction according to the type of ownership, type of legal organisation or mode of operation as such criteria do not relate to the characteristics of the economic activity. Economic units which engage in the same kind of economic activity are classified in the same category of SSIC, irrespective of whether they are corporate entities or government units, or operate in the formal or informal sector. Similarly, manufacturing units are classified according to the principal activity in which they are engaged in, regardless of whether the work is performed manually or by machinery, or whether the activity is carried out in a factory or household.

Principal, Secondary and Ancillary Activities

4 The term "activity" is defined as a process resulting in a homogeneous set of products. An activity may consist of one simple process (e.g. weaving), or it may cover a whole range of sub-processes. For example, the manufacturing of a car is considered as one activity even though its integrated production process encompasses sub-activities such as casting, forging, welding, assembling etc.

5 The principal activity of an economic unit is the activity that contributes the most to the value added of the goods and services produced by the unit, or the activity with the highest value added among the activities of the unit. Where it is not possible to obtain information on value added of the goods sold or services rendered, the principal activity is determined by the proportion of the gross output that is attributable to the goods or services. In instances where the output ratio is not applicable, the principal activity is determined from the proportion of employment in the various activities.

6 A secondary activity refers to each separate activity undertaken by the economic unit that produces products or services eventually for third parties and which is not the unit's principal activity.

7 Ancillary activities are those that are undertaken to support the main productive activities of a unit by providing goods or services entirely or primarily for the use of that unit. Examples of such activities are bookkeeping, purchasing, storage and sales promotion.

Classification by Principal Activity

8 Some economic units may engage in multiple related activities (e.g. manufacturing of different types of goods, providing both freight and passenger air transport services) or multiple unrelated activities (e.g. investment holding and publishing). These units are to be classified according to their principal activity.

9 In some economic units, the activities undertaken are vertically integrated i.e. the activities extend over a number of stages in the production or fabrication of a product and the output of one process serves as the input for the next (e.g. tree felling combined with sawmilling, production of pulp combined with operation of paper mill). Such units are also to be classified based on their principal activity, instead of the final activity which was used to classify similar units previously. This change in rule is expected to have minimal impact as it is often the case that separate units would be established for individual activities which are significant.

10 In instances where value added cannot be determined for each of the vertically integrated activities, the principal activity could be determined by comparison with units engaged in similar activities. If this still does not allow for the principal activity to be determined, the unit will be classified on the basis of its final activity.

Structure of the Classification

11 The SSIC 2010 is a classification with a hierarchical structure. At the highest level of aggregation, there are 22 broad categories known as “sections”, each denoted by a single alphabetical letter. Each section comprises one or more divisions, the breakdown of which is shown below:

	Section	Divisions
A	Agriculture and Fishing	01-03
B	Mining and Quarrying	08-09
C	Manufacturing	10-32
D	Electricity, Gas and Air-Conditioning Supply	35
E	Water Supply; Sewerage, Waste Management and Remediation Activities	36-38
F	Construction	41-43
G	Wholesale and Retail Trade	46-47
H	Transportation and Storage	49-53
I	Accommodation and Food Service Activities	55-56
J	Information and Communications	58-63
K	Financial and Insurance Activities	64-66
L	Real Estate Activities	68
M	Professional, Scientific and Technical Activities	69-75
N	Administrative and Support Service Activities	77-82
O	Public Administration and Defence	84
P	Education	85
Q	Health and Social Services	86-88
R	Arts, Entertainment and Recreation	90-93
S	Other Service Activities	94-96
T	Activities of Households as Employers of Domestic Personnel	97
U	Activities of Extra-Territorial Organisations and Bodies	99
V	Activities not Adequately Defined	00

12 The 82 two-digit divisions constitute the highest numerical category in the SSIC 2010. They are broken down into more detailed categories comprising 204 three-digit groups and 388 four-digit classes. There are altogether 1,097 five-digit items at the most detailed level.

13 A numerical five-digit coding system is used to distinguish the different levels of classification. The numbering system is hierarchical in nature, showing progressively finer detail from the highest level of aggregation (section) to the lowest level (five-digit). This allows users the flexibility to tabulate, analyse and publish data according to the level of detail required.

Classification	Title	Code
Section	Manufacturing	C
Division	Manufacture of Computer, Electronic and Optical Products	26
Group	Manufacture of Electronic Components and Boards	261
Class	Manufacture of Semiconductor Devices	2611
Item	Semiconductor Wafer Fabrication	26112

14 In cases where a given level of classification is not divided into categories at the next more detailed level of classification, the last digit of the code for the only category at the next more detailed level would be '0'. For instance, the group 'Construction of Buildings' is coded as 410 as the division 'Construction of Buildings' (code 41) contains only one group. Similarly, the code for the class 'Passenger and Freight Rail Transport' is 4910 as it is the only class within the group 'Transport via Railways' (code 491).

15 At the three, four and five-digit level, the digit '9' that appears in the last digit position denotes residual activities grouped at the respective level of detail. These residual activities do not usually constitute homogeneous primary activity groups, but rather, diverse activities which are not sufficiently significant to justify separate codes. In the classification, they are grouped together as a separate industry so that no activities, however small or insignificant, are left out of the classification scheme.

16 The numerical codes of the SSIC 2010 are closely aligned with ISIC Rev. 4 to facilitate easy comparison between the two classifications. As such, the codes at the two, three and four-digit levels may not run consecutively if an ISIC code is not used in SSIC. For instance, the SSIC does not contain the ISIC codes 05 'Mining of Coal and Lignite', 06 'Extraction of Crude Petroleum and Natural Gas' and 07 'Mining of Metal Ores'.

Application of the Classification

Outsourcing

17 Outsourcing is an arrangement whereby a unit (principal) engages the service of another unit (contractor) to carry out specific tasks in the production process on a fee or contract basis.

18 If only part of the production process is outsourced, the principal is classified as though it undertakes the complete production process itself. For service industries and construction, the principal is also classified as though it undertakes the production process itself regardless of whether part or all of the production process is outsourced. However, in manufacturing, its classification when all of the production process is outsourced depends on whether it owns the input materials. If it does, it is classified in manufacturing as it owns both the inputs and final output. However, if it does not own the inputs, it cannot be so regarded, as it is in fact purchasing the final goods from the contractor for resale to other parties. As such, it is more appropriate to be classified in section G 'Wholesale and Retail Trade' according to the type of sale and the type of goods sold.

19 For the various scenarios outlined earlier, the contractors are to be classified in the same activity as units that produce the same goods and services for their own account. The only exception is when a contractor carries out wholesale trade on a contract or fee basis in which case it is classified in SSIC 46100 (wholesale on a fee or contract basis) instead of the other wholesale activities regardless of the type of goods being traded.

Firms not yet in Operation

20 In some cases, firms may need to carry out preparatory activities before they can commence operations. Shops or restaurants, for example, might need to renovate their premises. If they undertake these activities themselves, they are to be classified based on their intended activity and not their preparatory activity such as interior decoration or construction. While this principle is conceptually to be applied also in the case of large enterprises or establishments (e.g. hotels, factories, theme parks), we should note that it is more likely for them to either outsource the preparatory activities or to establish separate establishments to undertake them. In this case, the large enterprises or establishments are to be classified under their intended activity while the establishments they set up to undertake the preparatory activity are to be classified under the appropriate preparatory activity.

Retail Trade of Self-Produced Goods

21 In some cases, an economic unit may sell the goods they produce directly to the consumer. As retail trade essentially involves the sale of goods purchased, the earnings or value-added of which is the trade margin, the sale of goods by the producer should not be viewed as a separate activity. A manufacturing establishment which sells its own products is therefore to be classified under manufacturing and not retail trade. For example, a tailor is to be classified under SSIC 14105 (tailoring and dressmaking) in manufacturing and not as a retailer even though he makes and sells clothes to his customers. However, if the manufacturing establishment sells other goods (in addition to self-produced goods), the selling of the other goods is a retail activity. If the value-added arising from the sale of other goods is more than the value-added from the manufacture (and sale) of its own produced good, then its principal activity is retail trade.

Provision of Goods and Services through Electronic Means

22 The provision of goods and services through electronic means has become increasingly prevalent with the rapid development in Information Communications Technology (ICT) over the past few years. Despite the different medium involved, the approach adopted in classifying these activities is still to classify them based on their principal activity. However, there is one notable exception to this rule. In retail trade, units that undertake their sales exclusively or predominantly through the internet are classified in the class 4791 'Retail Sale via Mail Order Houses or via Internet'.

Government Activities

23 Not all government activities are classified under the Section O 'Public Administration and Defence'. Activities carried out by government units that are specifically attributable to other sections of the SSIC should be classified in those sections. For instance, government schools are classified in Section P 'Education' while the monetary authority is classified in Section K 'Financial and Insurance Activities'.

Repair and Maintenance

24 Depending on the nature of the goods, economic units carrying out repair and maintenance activities can either be classified under Section C 'Manufacturing' or Section S 'Other Service Activities'. Units that repair or overhaul capital goods are classified in the same class or activity as the units that produce the goods in Section C 'Manufacturing'. This is because economic units manufacturing such goods often also provide repairing and maintenance services for the same goods. Activities pertaining to the repair of consumer goods (e.g. cars, computers, hand phones, household and personal goods) are classified in the division 95 'Repair of Computers, Personal & Household Goods, and Vehicles' in Section S 'Other Service Activities'.

26 The number of broad sections remains at 22 in SSIC 2010, similar to SSIC 2005. One of the major changes is the shift of the two-digit division containing non-real estate rental and leasing activities from the previous section 'Real Estate, Rental and Leasing Activities' to the section 'Administrative and Support Service Activities' in SSIC 2010. As a result, the section 'Real Estate, Rental and Leasing Activities' has been renamed as 'Real Estate Activities'.

27 There is a change in alphabets for some sections, partly due to the use of "Section I" in SSIC 2010 (but not in SSIC 2005) and partly due to the shift of the section 'Public Administration and Defence' from Section T in SSIC 2005 to Section O in SSIC 2010. The broad sections in SSIC 2010 run consecutively from Section A to Section V.

28 The number of two-digit, three-digit and four-digit codes has increased significantly in SSIC 2010, which results in finer details at the division, group and class level.

30 A comparison table of SSIC 2010 and SSIC 2005 down to the class (four-digit) level is presented in the Appendix.

31 At the more detailed level, a number of five-digit codes have been introduced to identify new and emerging industries as well as to highlight existing ones which have become significant, but were combined with other industries previously. Some of these five-digit codes are shown below:

32 In the area of environment, codes have been introduced for a wide range of activities including manufacturing (solar wafers, solar modules), engineering services (clean energy systems), research and development (environment and clean technologies), financial (carbon credit brokers) and consultancy services (carbon consultancy) as well as promotion (organisations for the protection of the environment and animals).

33 Unique codes have also been created for a variety of services in the media (animation production, development of software for interactive digital media), financial services (marine insurance, hedge fund management), intellectual property (patents brokerage), entertainment (casinos, theme parks) and charitable (philanthropic trusts and foundations) sectors.

34 On the other hand, codes for activities which have become insignificant (e.g. manufacturing of some audio-video equipment, healthcare management organisations) have been consolidated. Codes in SSIC 2005 which are difficult for a firm's predominant activity to be identified (e.g. mixed construction activities, composite insurance, composite reinsurance) have also been removed in SSIC 2010. Establishments previously classified under these codes will be recoded based on their predominant construction, insurance and reinsurance activity. For establishments previously classified in the activity 'distant learning infrastructure providers', they would be recoded to education service (if they offer education services via long distance learning) or information technology services (if they develop the software).
