PREFACE

The Singapore Department of Statistics (DOS) develops national statistical standards and promotes their adoption and use in Singapore. The adoption and use of these standards in the collection, analysis and dissemination of statistics ensure consistency and comparability of data, facilitating relevant and meaningful analysis as well as data sharing.

Classifications of economic activities have been standardised and published as the Singapore Standard Industrial Classification (SSIC) since 1958. The SSIC is used for censuses of population, household and establishment surveys and increasingly, in administrative databases. The SSIC adopts the basic framework and principles of the International Standard Industrial Classification of All Economic Activities (ISIC) developed by the United Nations Statistics Division. It is reviewed and updated regularly to reflect significant changes in the structure of the Singapore economy and the emergence of new activities as well as to align with changes in the international standard.

The SSIC 2015 (Version 2018) is an update of the SSIC 2015 edition and maintains the SSIC 2015's classification principles and structure. The purpose of this update is to ensure the classification remains current. This publication includes the industrial codes, scope and structure of the classification as well as descriptions of the concepts and principles. Similar to the SSIC 2015, detailed write-up is provided at the class (four-digit) level to facilitate better understanding and application of the classification.

The updates to the SSIC are based on inputs from various ministries and statutory boards. I would like to thank all who have contributed to the update of the classification.

SINGAPORE STANDARD INDUSTRIAL CLASSIFICATION 2015 (VERSION 2018)

Introduction

The Singapore Standard Industrial Classification (SSIC) is designed for use in the collection of data (e.g. censuses, surveys, administrative records) that requires the classification of economic activities. It is also used in the compilation, presentation and analysis of a wide range of statistics, including national income, production, as well as demographic, social and labour statistics.

2 The SSIC 2015 (Version 2018) adopts the basic framework of the International Standard Industrial Classification Revision 4 (ISIC Rev. 4) with appropriate modifications to take into account characteristics of Singapore's economic landscape while enhancing international comparability. The classification also incorporates recent changes in economic activities to better reflect the current structure of Singapore's economy.

3 The updates to SSIC 2015 (Version 2018) are relatively minor. The SSIC 2015's classification principles and overall structure are maintained to facilitate data comparison. The updates are mainly to capture new and emerging activities and provide greater clarity to descriptions of classes (four-digit) and item (five-digit) to facilitate data collection and compilation.

Nature and Principles of the Classification

Conceptual Framework

4 The SSIC is a classification of economics activities undertaken by economic units. It does not distinguish by the type of ownership, type of legal organisation or mode of operation as such criteria do not relate to the characteristics of the economic activity. Economic units which engage in the same kind of economic activity are classified in the same category of SSIC, regardless of whether they are corporate entities or government units, or operate in the formal or informal sector. Similarly, manufacturing units are classified according to the principal activity in which they are engaged in, regardless of whether the work is performed manually or by machinery, or whether the activity is carried out in a factory or household.

Principal, Secondary and Ancillary Activities

5 The term "activity" is defined as a process resulting in a homogeneous set of products. An activity may consist of one simple process (e.g. weaving), or it may comprise a whole range of sub-processes. For example, the manufacturing of a car is considered as one activity even though its integrated production process encompasses sub-activities such as casting, forging, welding and assembling.

6 The principal activity of an economic unit is the activity that contributes the most to the value added of the goods and services produced by the unit, or the activity with the highest value added among the activities of the unit. Where it is not possible to obtain information on value added of the goods sold or services rendered, the principal activity could be determined by substitute criteria such as the gross output that is attributable to the goods or services or the proportion of employment in the various activities.

7 A secondary activity refers to each separate activity undertaken by the economic unit that produces products or services for third parties which is not the unit's principal activity.

8 Ancillary activities are those that are undertaken to support the main productive activities of a unit by providing goods or services entirely or primarily for the use of that unit. Examples of such activities are human resource functions, bookkeeping, purchasing, storage and sales promotion.

Classification by Principal Activity

9 Some economic units may engage in multiple related activities (e.g. manufacturing of different types of goods, providing both freight and passenger air transport services) or multiple unrelated activities (e.g. investment holding and publishing). These units are to be classified according to their principal activity.

10 In some economic units, the activities undertaken are vertically integrated, i.e. the activities extend over a number of stages in the production or fabrication of a product and the output of one process serves as the input for the next (e.g. tree felling combined with sawmilling, production of pulp combined with operation of paper mill). Such units are to be classified based on their principal activity.

11 In instances where the value added cannot be estimated for each of the vertically integrated activities, the principal activity could be determined by comparison with units that engaged in similar activities. If this cannot be done, the unit should then be classified based on its final activity.

Structure of the Classification

12 The SSIC 2015 (Version 2018) is a classification with a hierarchical structure. At the highest level of aggregation, there are 22 broad categories known as “Sections”, each denoted by a single alphabetical letter. Each section comprises one or more divisions, as shown below:

	Section	Divisions
A	Agriculture and Fishing	01-03
B	Mining and Quarrying	08-09
C	Manufacturing	10-32
D	Electricity, Gas, Steam and Air-Conditioning Supply	35
E	Water Supply; Sewerage, Waste Management and Remediation Activities	36-38
F	Construction	41-43
G	Wholesale and Retail Trade	46-47
H	Transportation and Storage	49-53
I	Accommodation and Food Service Activities	55-56
J	Information and Communications	58-63
K	Financial and Insurance Activities	64-66
L	Real Estate Activities	68
M	Professional, Scientific and Technical Activities	69-75
N	Administrative and Support Service Activities	77-82
O	Public Administration and Defence	84
P	Education	85
Q	Health and Social Services	86-88
R	Arts, Entertainment and Recreation	90-93
S	Other Service Activities	94-96
T	Activities of Households as Employers of Domestic Personnel	97
U	Activities of Extra-Territorial Organisations and Bodies	99
V	Activities not Adequately Defined	00

13 The 82 two-digit divisions constitute the highest numerical category in the SSIC 2015 (Version 2018). They are broken down into more detailed categories comprising 204 three-digit groups and 386 four-digit classes. There are altogether 1,063 five-digit items at the most detailed level.

14 The numbering system is hierarchical in nature, showing progressively finer detail from the highest level of aggregation (section) to the lowest level (five-digit). This allows users the flexibility to tabulate, analyse and publish data according to the level of detail required.

Classification	Title	Code
Section	Manufacturing	C
Division	Manufacture of Computer, Electronic and Optical Products	26
Group	Manufacture of Electronic Components and Boards	261
Class	Manufacture of Semiconductor Devices	2611
Item	Semiconductor Wafer Fabrication	26112

15 In cases where a given level of classification is not divided into categories at the next more detailed level of classification, the last digit of the code for the only category at the next more detailed level would be '0'. For instance, the group 'Construction of Buildings' is coded as 410 as the division 'Construction of Buildings' (code 41) contains only one group. Similarly, the code for the class 'Passenger and Freight Rail Transport' is 4910 as it is the only class within the group 'Transport via Railways' (code 491).

16 At the three, four and five-digit level, the digit '9' that appears in the last digit position denotes residual activities grouped at the respective level of detail. These residual activities usually do not constitute homogeneous primary activity categories, but are mostly diverse activities which are not sufficiently significant to justify separate codes in the classification. They are grouped together as a separate category so that no activities, however small or insignificant, are left out of the classification structure. The description of such codes usually ends with the term 'n.e.c.', which stands for 'not elsewhere classified'.

17 The numerical codes of the SSIC 2015 (Version 2018) are closely aligned with the ISIC Rev. 4 to facilitate comparison between the two classifications. As such, the codes at the two, three and four-digit levels may not run consecutively if an ISIC code is not used in SSIC. For instance, the SSIC does not contain the ISIC codes 05 'Mining of Coal and Lignite', 06 'Extraction of Crude Petroleum and Natural Gas' and 07 'Mining of Metal Ores'.

Application of the Classification

Outsourcing

18 Outsourcing is an arrangement whereby a unit (principal) engages the service of another unit (contractor) to carry out specific tasks in the production process on a fee or contract basis.

19 If only part of the production process is outsourced, the principal is classified as though it undertakes the complete production process itself. For service industries and construction, the principal is also classified as though it undertakes the production process itself regardless of whether part or all of the production process is outsourced. However, in manufacturing, the classification of the principal when all of the production process is outsourced depends on whether it owns the input materials. If the principal owns the input materials, it is classified in manufacturing as it owns both the inputs and final output. However, if it does not own the input materials, it cannot be so regarded, as it is in fact purchasing the final goods from the contractor for resale to other parties. As such, it would be more appropriate to classify the principal in Section G 'Wholesale and Retail Trade' according to the type of sale and the type of goods sold.

20 For the various scenarios outlined earlier, the contractors are to be classified in the same activity as units that produce the same goods and services for their own. The only exception is when a contractor carries out wholesale trade on a contract or fee basis in which case it is classified in SSIC 46100 (wholesale on a fee or contract basis) instead of the other wholesale activities, regardless of the type of goods being traded.

Firms not yet in Operation

21 In some cases, firms may need to carry out preparatory activities before they can commence operations. Shops or restaurants, for example, might need to renovate their premises. If they undertake these activities themselves, they are to be classified based on their intended activity and not their preparatory activity such as interior decoration or construction. While this principle is conceptually to be applied to large enterprises or establishments (e.g. hotels, factories, theme parks), it is usually more likely for them to either outsource the preparatory activities or to establish separate establishments to undertake them. In this case, the large enterprises or establishments are to be classified according to their intended activity while the establishments they set up to undertake the preparatory activity are to be classified under the appropriate preparatory activity.

Retail Trade of Self-Produced Goods

22 In some cases, an economic unit may sell the goods they produce directly to the consumer. As retail trade essentially involves the sale of goods purchased by the retailers, the sale of goods produced by manufacturers themselves should not be viewed as a separate activity. A manufacturing establishment which sells its own products is to be classified under manufacturing and not retail trade. For example, a tailor is to be classified under SSIC 14103 (tailoring and dressmaking) in manufacturing and not as a retailer even though he makes and sells clothes to his customers. However, if the manufacturing establishment sells other goods (in addition to self-produced goods), the selling of the other goods is a retail activity. If the value-added arising from the sale of other goods (i.e. the trade margin) is more than the value-added from the manufacture (and sale) of its own produced good, then its principal activity is retail trade and should be classified in Section G 'Wholesale and Retail Trade'.

Provision of Goods and Services through Electronic Means

23 The provision of goods and services through electronic means has become increasingly prevalent with the rapid development of Information Communications Technology (ICT) over the past few years. Despite the different medium involved, the economic units should still be classified based on their principal activity. There is, however, one notable exception to this rule. In the case of retail trade activity, units that undertake their sales exclusively or predominantly through the internet are to be classified in the class 4791 'Retail Sale via Internet'.

Government Activities

24 Activities carried out by government units that fall within the scope of other sections of the SSIC should be classified accordingly in those sections instead of under Section O 'Public Administration and Defence'. For instance, government schools are classified in Section P 'Education' while the monetary authority is classified in Section K 'Financial and Insurance Activities'.

Repair and Maintenance

25 Depending on the nature of the goods, economic units carrying out repair and maintenance activities can either be classified under Section C 'Manufacturing' or Section S 'Other Service Activities'. Units that repair or overhaul capital goods are classified in the same class or activity as the units that produce the goods in Section C 'Manufacturing' as economic units manufacturing such goods often also provide repairing and maintenance services for the same goods. Activities pertaining to the repair of consumer goods (e.g. cars, computers, hand phones, household and personal goods) are classified in division 95 'Repair of Computers, Personal & Household Goods and Vehicles' in Section S 'Other Service Activities'.

Comparison with SSIC 2015

26 The number of broad sections remains at 22 in the SSIC 2015 (Version 2018), similar to SSIC 2015 (see table below). The description of the sections also remains the same.

27 Similar to the SSIC 2015, the SSIC 2015 (Version 2018) also made reference to the ISIC Rev. 4, down to the four-digit level.

28 At the more detailed level, a number of five-digit codes have been introduced to reflect new activities as well as existing ones which have become significant while activities with declining number of establishments have been streamlined and combined. Overall, the total number of 5-digit codes decreased from 1,073 in SSIC 2015 to 1,063 in SSIC 2015 (Version 2018).

	SSIC 2015 (Version 2018)	SSIC 2015
Division (two-digit)	82	82
Group (three-digit)	204	204
Class (four-digit)	386	387
Item (five-digit)	1,063	1,073

29 For activities which are increasingly prevalent and can be separately identified, new codes have been created to cater for them. For instance, to reflect the increase in cybersecurity activities, separate codes for cybersecurity consultancy, and wholesale and retail sale of cybersecurity hardware, software and peripheral equipment have been created in the sections for consultancy and wholesale and retail trade respectively. Only establishments which engage exclusively or predominantly in consultancy or wholesale and retail trade are classified in the newly created codes. Another example is single/multiple family offices (previously classified in various SSIC codes), which are growing in numbers and can be separately identified from the other fund management activities and business and management consultancy activities.

30 Unique new codes have also been created to take into account various activities, such as manufacture and repair of additive manufacturing equipment (e.g. manufacturing and repairing of additive manufacturing equipment by their material type such as metal and polymer), transactions/payments processing activities (e.g. firms providing financial payments services) and maritime education and training (e.g. firms providing training to port, shipping and maritime-related businesses).

Section	Five-digit Codes Created

Section M: Professional, Scientific and Technical Activities	70206	Port, shipping and maritime-related consultancy services
Section P: Education	85495	Maritime education and training

32 Some activities with decreasing number of establishments or are difficult to distinguish from each other (e.g. insurance agencies and agents and financial advisory firms and advisers) have been streamlined and combined into fewer codes or a single code. Activities in SSIC 2015 which can be better classified in other existing codes (e.g. wholesale of specific commodities n.e.c.) have been removed in the SSIC 2015 (Version 2018). Establishments previously classified under these codes are reclassified to other codes based on their predominant activity.

Statistics Singapore Website

The Statistics Singapore Website was launched by the Singapore Department of Statistics (DOS) in January 1995. Internet users can access the website by connecting to:

<http://www.singstat.gov.sg>

Key Singapore statistics are available via the following sections:

- Statistics
which provides access to the latest statistical findings of DOS as well as statistics compiled by Research and Statistics Units (RSUs) in ministries and statutory boards.
- News
which provides a listing of the news released by DOS and RSUs.
- Publications
which presents the latest editions of DOS' publications, papers and articles.
- Browse by Themes which presents official statistics compiled by DOS and RSUs in the various ministries and statutory boards according to themes. Within each theme, relevant statistics and related press releases, publications and references are provided.

Statistical resources are available via:

- Publication and Papers which lists the latest editions of publications released by DOS according to statistical domains at <http://www.singstat.gov.sg/publications/publications-and-papers>. All softcopy DOS publications are available for free downloading. Statistical tables of DOS publications in Excel format are also available.
- Advance Release Calendar which provides a six months ahead advance release calendar of key statistical indicators.

The website also provides a convenient gateway to international statistical websites under the "Methodologies & Standards" section:

- Guide to International Statistics which provides hyperlinks to international databases and classifications, as well as websites of international bodies and other national statistical offices.
- IMF Dissemination Standards Bulletin Board which provides metadata about Singapore's key indicators in the real, fiscal, financial and external sectors, including dissemination practices and information about pre-release access of current indicators.
